A Nation Under Attack

NEW YORK 9/11/01 -- It began with a crash that shook a mighty high rise like a tuning fork.

As the tower swayed toward the Hudson River, a man gripped his desk and a woman flung herself under a table. Walls burst into flame, ceilings collapsed, elevator cars plunged. Office paperwork blew out of broken windows and fluttered about at 1,000 feet.

This was the World Trade Center on Sept. 11, 2001, when two American achievements - the skyscraper and the jetliner - were perverted to create unparalleled tragedy.

The Trade Center had always been about height, but once two jets smashed into the 110-story twin towers, location truly became destiny: the higher your floor, the lower your chances of survival.

Beyond that, people made their choices and took their chances.

An executive recruiter kicked off high heels and raced down 47 stories in her stockings, never looking back.

A bank manager fled to the ground floor but went back upstairs after being told things were OK.

A man on the 27th floor, who could have walked down to the street in a few minutes, stayed behind with a quadriplegic friend who was afraid of the smoke. A man on the 81st floor, who needed every second to escape, stopped to save a stranger.

All the while, firefighters laden with equipment trudged up into what became a collapsing inferno.

Many people were killed instantly when the fuel-heavy airliners exploded like bombs. Others, cut off from retreat by fire below, had time to phone, e-mail or instant message farewells to loved ones watching on television.

Never had so many felt so in touch and yet so helpless. It was as if the victims were dying atop Everest rather than in the heart of the nation's largest city.

Most people would escape the inferno, but more than 5,000 would not.

As the fire fighters and rescue workers tackle the monumental and horrific task of attempting to recover the missing, the nation tries to put itself back together.

The one thing that can be said about this entire nightmare, is that it has brought this nation together in a manner it has not seen since WW II. It is a pity that it took an act of evil to do it.

We at The AWARE Group extend our sympathy and prayers to all those who were affected by the tragedies of September 11th, 2001.

The AWARE Group's purpose is to disseminate information that is important to its members and their families. We are a leader in freedom technologies. In this issue, you will discover all the benefits of being AWARE.

The Hidden Threat To The American Way of Life

Today American citizens are in grave danger. The danger comes from hi-tech terrorists who may soon claim the lives of not hundreds or even thousands but millions of innocent men, women and children in the US and elsewhere around the world.

The first hints of such a danger surfaced on Monday, March 20, 1995, in the Tokyo subway system. In restrooms and on subway trains, odd packages started spewing a mysterious gas that made those around the lethal boxes suddenly, violently ill. In the end Japan was held hostage for weeks until the terrorists that had planted the boxes filled with nerve gas were captured.

Few civilians actually died in the attacks; had the terrorists been truly skilled at what they were doing, the fatalities could easily have been thousands of times worse. The important point was that the attack marked a new age of terrorism, when something besides crude bombs and guns could be employed to "make a statement" to governments and the populations they controlled. As Kyle Olson of the Chemical and Biological Arms Control Institute in Alexandria, VA put it, "Terrorists have taken that step across the threshold into the use of weapons of mass destruction." The Tokyo attacks were hardly more than a dress rehearsal for what a professional terrorist group might easily accomplish.

Surprisingly this wasn't the first such attack on civilians by weapons that once were called "unthinkable" because it was assumed they were too awful to ever be used. In fact, a successful biological weapons attack was mounted a little over ten years earlier.

Past Biological Attacks In The US.

The attack took place in September 1984, in Oregon. As with the Japanese subway attack, this one was mounted by a religious cult, the Rajneeshi, who were trying to take over the local political system of the town where they had set up their headquarters. To swing the election that they hoped would vote into office members of the sect, the group cultivated salmonella bacteria in an underground lab.

They then filled small vials of water laced with the bacteria and spread out over town, surreptitiously pouring the deadly liquid over lettuce in salad bars, produce in grocery stores, and so forth.

The goal of this reckless act was to make enough townspeople ill that they wouldn't go to the voting booths, thereby allowing the Rajneeshi to swing the election in their favor.' The attack eventually made 751 people sick, including babies; in all, nearly a tenth of the town was laid low with the intense illness. One frightening aspect of this story is that the attack went undetected. No one ever connected the cult to the strange illness that swept through the tiny town.

It was only later, when a former member came forward and told the authorities, that the attack was discovered. Such attacks can be mounted with only rudimentary knowledge of laboratory methods, and such assaults may not only go undetected but may even remain a mystery.

This makes biological weapons revolting to good people. And attractive to terrorists.

Which is why many experts on terrorism worry that the next attack against US citizens may be made with biological weapons. Virtually all are certain such an attack will occur sometime in the near future. It isn't a question of whether it will happen, but rather when and where it will take place in the U.S., and how much death and devastation will be caused.

The AWARE Group is continually adding resources to its arsenal to assist all Members in preparing for the inevitable biological attack.

Anthrax, The Weapon of Choice

However bad the terrorist onslaught on the United States on 9/11/01 may have been, a more deadly scenario — an assault with chemical or biological weapons, may be on our horizon.

"One has to know that a terrorist can attack at any time and any place using any technique..." Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld warned.

Rumsfeld told Americans that terrorist aggression could take many forms. "It could be ships, it could be subways." "What they can do is use these asymmetrical threats of terrorism and chemical warfare and biological warfare and ballistic missiles and cruise missiles and cyber attacks."

Evoked is a nightmare scene in which terrorists could unleash deadly anthrax on the Washington metro, the underground railway system, potentially killing tens of thousands of people.

The colorless, odorless bacteria is lethal unless antibiotics are administered immediately. Otherwise the victim dies within days.

A 1998 plan to immunize US troops against the bacteria has been blocked by opposition within the ranks and in Congress, where concern has been raised about unwelcome side effects.

General Randall West, an undersecretary at the Pentagon who specializes in chemical and germ warfare threats, stated that anthrax is widespread and favored by many US enemies.

"We do know that several of our potential adversaries have an active chemical and biological weaponization program..." said West.

"Anthrax seems to be the weapon of choice for several reasons. It's not terribly difficult or expensive to make." he said.

"There is quite a bit that is manufactured by others in the world, that is available in the black market." he added.

The former senior adviser to the secretary of defense on biological and chemical warfare said the danger could come from terrorist groups as well as nation states and could be delivered in bombs, missiles or through spraying.

"We know there are some terrorist groups that have tried to get it," West said. "We know that at least one did and tried to use it a couple of times, but I can't get into the specifics of that."

How Hard would it be to attack America, or any other country for that matter, with a biological agent?

It would require just a small private plane, not a hijacked commercial jetliner. A helper could casually dump a bag of powdery bacterial spores while in flight, rather than having to overpower a planeload of passengers. And the team could land and be home in time for dinner instead of ending it all in a suicidal inferno.

Experts say that bio-terrorism of this nature would be a lot easier to conduct and is more likely to occur in the next few years than a replay of last week's terrorist tragedies. A small cloud of bacteria or viruses could easily and silently infect tens of thousands of people, triggering fatal outbreaks of anthrax, smallpox, pneumonic plague or any of a dozen other deadly diseases. And victims infected with contagious ailments could pass the microbes to thousands of others before doctors even figured out what was going on.

Moreover, bio-terrorism could foment political instability, given the panic that fast-moving plagues have historically engendered.

"The events in New York and Washington were tragedies beyond what anyone had previously imagined, but the potential of biological terrorism is far greater in terms of loss of life and disruption." said Michael Osterholm, director of the University of Minnesota's Center for Infectious Disease Research and Policy. "It would be less graphic -- no flames and explosions -- but much more insidious. Anyone with a cough would be a weapon."

In many respects the nation is less prepared for bio-terrorism than it is for conventional acts of terrorism. An October 1999 General Accounting Office (GAO) report documented major gaps in the nation's system for protecting itself against biological attacks. Inspectors found shortages of vaccines and medicines, stockrooms filled with expired drugs, and lax security measures where crucial drugs were stored.

A January 2001 report by the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention (CDC) in Atlanta concluded that the nation's public health infrastructure is "not adequate to detect and respond to a bio-terrorist event." And a March 2001 GAO report noted that 20 percent of the nation's pharmaceutical and medical supplies held by the federal Office of Emergency Preparedness for a bio-terrorist attack were stored in a vault whose temperature was 95 degrees and that had no air-conditioning. The medicines' potency could be assured only if kept cooler than 86 degrees.

Some improvements have been implemented since then. Still, the nation and the world are largely unprepared to fight major outbreaks of deadly diseases like plague, said Norman Cantor, an emeritus professor at New York University and a plague scholar.

"It would be some improvement over the

Middle Ages, but not all that great an improvement." he said.

An international biological weapons convention signed by 143 nations has outlawed the development, production and stockpiling of biological weapons since 1975, but the absence of any formal verification regime to monitor compliance has limited the effectiveness of the convention, according to the United Nations. In any case, terrorists don't play by the rules. And at least five countries known to sponsor international terrorism have acquired the capacity to produce biological weapons, according to U.S. Army experts.

Despite those capabilities, U.S. preparedness has lagged, in part because bio-terrorism has been deemed so unlikely. "Who would do such a thing?" skeptics asked. Last week's attacks in New York and Washington seriously undermined such rational assurances.

Biological attacks can be far more difficult to respond to than conventional terrorist attacks. For one thing, they are covert rather than overt; for days, no one would know that one had occurred. That's a huge problem for a disease like anthrax. Up to 80 percent of people infected by inhaled spores die within days if untreated. By the time symptoms appear -- fever, rash and congested lungs -- it's generally too late.

Another problem is that the first-line defenders against a biological attack would not be police and fire officials, who are specially trained for public safety emergencies. They would be local doctors and hospital staffers, most of whom have received little training in the art and science of being able to recognize and respond to unusual outbreaks quickly.

And contagious diseases -- unlike explosions -- keep spreading long after an initial attack. Smallpox, for example, is easily spread by coughing and sneezing. The disease was declared eradicated in 1980, but vials of the virus were saved and the whereabouts of some are uncertain. Vaccination no longer occurs, leaving an entire generation susceptible to attack. And few doses of the old vaccine remain in storage.

In a federal exercise three months ago, 24 simulated cases of smallpox were "discovered" in U.S. hospitals as part of an assessment of U.S. bio-terrorism preparedness. Less than two weeks after those cases popped up, computer models indicated that -- if the exercise had been real -- 15,000 people would have contracted the disease and 1,000 would have died. The "epidemic" was still raging when the exercise ended, and the computer models predicted, rioting and looting would have broken out as vaccine supplies ran out.

"This would cripple the United States if it were to occur," a former defense department official testified to Congress after the exercise.

Gary Hart, former Democratic senator from Colorado and one-time presidential candidate has stated; "The next attack will not be airliners. It will be chemical, biological or nuclear weapons in cities like Denver or Seattle or Nashville or cities like that..."

Your Failure To Act Could Cost You Everything!

Learn the truth about Bio-Terrorism and what you can and should do to protect yourself and your family from ultimate disaster. Don't depend on government to protect you. They can't! The events on "911" proved that. The government is taking "certian precautions", but protecting you and your family is just not their highest priority. They have assured protections for themselves. They have protected shelters stocked with provisions that will last almost indefinitely, but not for you! It's for them!

Bio-Terrorism is the logical next step in this now "Declared War." Don't risk not having this information. Look around you at how many people are in shock and frozen from doing anything. Don't be one of them! Get a move on!

WHAT YOU DO HAVE TO DECIDE IS THIS; - SELECT "A" OR "B"

A.) If terrorists strike with Anthrax in your area, (or it comes to your neighborhood via someone as an unknown carrier) and "you do" have the necessary lifesaving information, you and your family are going to live!

B.) If terrorists strike with Anthrax in your area, (or it comes to your neighborhood via someone as an unknown carrier) and "you don't" have the necessary lifesaving information, you and your family are going to die!

Live or die? Choose which one!

Get your seminar tickets NOW for Philadelphia, Penn. Oct. 13; Tampa, Fla. Oct. 27; or Irvine, Calif. Nov. 10. You can order seminar tickets on the top of page 5 or on-line at <http://www.theawaregroup.com>.

We can show you how to protect yourself and your family, but you have to take the first step.

Are Your Freedoms In Jeopardy?

More terrorist attacks are not the only threat facing the United States, warn civil libertarians. Some basic personal freedoms are also at risk.

The White House plans to ask Congress for wider powers to use wiretaps to find and prosecute terrorists. Stated U.S. Attorney General John Ashcroft.

It's just one of a long list of measures, either proposed or in the works, that could change life in the United States.

There could soon be tougher immigration laws, more search warrants, increased security at airports, and a surge in surveillance by law enforcement agencies. Many businesses may cut off public access to buildings, and photo identification is expected to become even more common.

A small but highly symbolic example will happen when major league baseball games resume Monday: fans will no longer be allowed to bring coolers, backpacks, or large bags into stadiums.

A recent poll suggests that a majority of Americans don't mind delays at airports caused by the extra security, and that nearly 40% would be willing to let the government monitor their phone calls and e-mail.

But some people warn that there could be a high price paid in the long term if too many liberties are given up in the war against terrorism.

"What I worry about, of course, is that this emergency won't be over at any definable time in the future," says Alan Lichtman of American University.

"I think any sharp curtailment of our civil liberties should be temporary," he adds. "We should not authorize broad new statute law that might extend indefinitely."

Politicians must be careful not to finish what the terrorists started, according to some Americans.

"I feel, like, if we're going in that direction, we're letting the terrorists win," said one man in Washington. "What we're about is civil liberties."

True Wealth

Something to Consider...

You know, few things have endured as long as Precious Metals. With a history of over 5,000 years, through centuries of war and peace, feast and famine, economic boom and bust, amid global turmoil--Precious Metals have always had the unique ability to stand firm and retain their intrinsic value. Thus, Precious Metals has a proven track record in maintaining their purchasing power relative to other financial assets.

In many cultures, Precious Metals are regarded as family treasures to be passed on to one's children and children's children. This principle has held true not merely in theory, but in historical fact and is easy to see "why" when you consider the following.

In 1898 one ounce of Gold would buy you a top quality suit of clothes. Today, 100 years later, you can still buy a top quality suit of clothes for the value of an ounce of Gold. 3600 years ago in Babylon, an ounce of Gold could buy you 350 loaves of fresh baked bread. Today, the value of one ounce of Gold will still purchase 350 loaves of bread.

In 1978 you could buy a very nice 3-bedroom, 2-bath home for about $40,000 or the value of 250 ounces of Gold. In 1988, 10 years later, you could buy a very nice 3-bedroom, 2-bath home for about $60,000 or the value of 250 ounces of Gold. In 1998, 20 years later, you can still buy a very nice 3-bedroom, 2-bath home for about $80,000 or the value of 250 ounces of Gold.

The "true value" of Precious Metals, especially Gold "is not" future prices, but the fact that it maintains its "purchasing power" relative to the dollar. Precious Metals has a 5,000-year track record for lasting, wealth-building value that is recognized around the world as the "REAL Foundation" of ALL monetary systems. In a world where other assets, such as currencies, are depreciated by high inflation or interest rates--no single nation or borrower can easily manipulate the price of Precious Metals.

Precious Metals are internationally recognized monetary and financial assets held in reserve by major governments. Governments hold more than one-third of all the Precious Metals in existence. Precious metals are becoming the most important consideration in many transactions due to their Security, Privacy and Portability. When you buy Precious Metals you own something solid, highly liquid, has no geographic boundaries and can be converted to cash at any time without worries. Precious Metals are an asset, which does not depend upon any government or corporation's promise to repay...thus, they are the only international currency that cannot be frozen. This is why Precious Metals are called the "ultimate asset" and purchased as a hedge against inflation.

It's never been said of Precious Metals that "they're not worth the paper they're printed on!"

The purchasing power of Precious Metals have been remarkably stable over the long run, whereas the purchasing power of the U.S. dollar has steadily declined. For example: If 30 years ago you had the ability to place 5 million dollars in a safe and took it out today it would have the purchasing power of 1 million dollars. But...If 30 years ago you had the ability to place 5 million dollars of Precious Metals in a safe and took them out today they would have the purchasing power of 10 million dollars.

In U.S. history there have been many Stock Market Crashes, corrections, and financial hard times.

In a panic, paper assets, stocks, bonds and companies disappear overnight...bankrupting millions of formerly rich Americans. Yet, through the good times and the bad, Precious Metals remains the safest and most predictable havens for the long-term protection of your life savings. Somehow, for some reason, Precious Metals are always the last word in safety and security. The safety and security of owning Precious Metals in troubled times cannot be disputed.

Even though The AWARE Group does not sell Precious Metals, the Director of AWARE has vast experience as a commodities broker and as an avid Precious Metal collector. At AWARE seminars, attendees are shown how to protect their net worth through the purchase Precious Metals, and the utilization of Contracts of Pure Trusts and Offshore Centers. Details on upcoming seminars can be found on page 5.

"Deficit spending is simply a scheme for the 'hidden' confiscation of wealth. Gold stands in the way of this insidious process. It stands as a protector of property rights." Alan Greenspan

Why Offshore?

As you know, privacy rights are gone in the United States. Your bank statements, phone logs, credit card purchases, brokerage statements, medical records, etc., are available to anyone who might want to see them. Of course, any information about your property holdings, leases, credit is also readily available. Predatory lawyers and government employees are free to draw adverse conclusions from these records as they build a profile on you for whatever reason they choose.

The idea of separation of powers, so critical to a democracy, is largely abandoned by the US governments regulatory and bureaucratic rulings. Regulatory agencies of the federal government have the combined authority of the legislative, judicial, and executive branches of government. The Post Office, IRS, DEA, SEC, ATF, FBI, and other agencies can seize your assets and deem you guilty of crimes against the state, (victimless crimes) without due process, and it becomes your responsibility to prove your innocence. The concept of "innocent until proven guilty", for non-violent crimes, is gone.

One of the few remaining avenues available for personal privacy, is Offshore centers. An Offshore Center provides you with a viable weapon in your privacy arsenal.

Who can benefit from going offshore?

Anybody with a net worth, anyone with assets that may be attached in a potential lawsuit, those wishing to invest without having a tax penalty on the returns, those who wish to run their business in a less restrictive legislation and those who would just like to retain a little plain old privacy in their affairs.

You can discover how you will benefit from Offshore centers at an AWARE Group seminar. Refer to the seminar schedule on page 5 for full details.

Dial 911 and Die

Who's responsibility is it for your safety and security? In his book, "Dial 911 and Die", Attorney at law Richard W. Stevens chronicles, on a state by state basis, how emergency services are not there to protect you as an individual. There are some horrific examples of assaults, rapes, robberies, murders and everything you can imagine. What does the court say on a case by case basis? That it is up to the individual to provide the level of protection they want. The protection provided for the public is for the public in general, not for any specific individual.

Nobody has brought up the fact that the governments prime function is to protect the public in general. They failed miserably on Sept. 11, 2001. Now they wish to show their prowess by the investigatory phase and of course what government does best, going to war. That won't help the victims, will it?

Dial 911 and Die can be ordered directly from www.jpfo.org for $11.95 ppd. They told this writer that if you mention The AWARE Group when you place your order, they will include a second book (title of their choice) absolutely free.

Tort Law vs. Contract Law

There are two great divisions in American Jurisprudence: Tort Law and Contract Law. Very simply, Contract Law applies to govern a settlement of a grievance whenever a contract is in effect. This means that only certain types of very narrow arguments are allowed to be plead in Contract Law grievances, since only the content of the contract is of any relevance in the grievance settlement. The reason why statutes are sometimes brought into a Contract Law judgment setting, statutes that do not appear anywhere within the body proper of the contract, is because the contract was written under the supervisory Commerce Jurisdiction of the State, and that therefore those statutes form a superseding part of the contract.

There are many subdivisions within Contract Law, such as Securities Law, Estate Inheritance, Quasi-Contract, Statutory Contract, Taxes, Copyright and Trademark Infringement Law, Commercial Business Practice under either the Law Merchant or the Uniform Commercial Code, Insurance, Admiralty and Maritime Contracts, etc. Operating a business under a regulated statutory juristic environment is very much a contract, since a numerous array of Government benefits are being accepted by Game-players in Commerce.

And in contrast to that, we have Tort Law. Think of Tort Law as being a Judgment Law to settle grievances between persons where there are damages, but without any contract in effect between the parties.

A good contrasting way to define a Tort is by enumerating on the things that it is not: It is not a breach of contract. Included under the heading of Torts are such miscellaneous civil wrongs, ranging from simple and direct interferences against a person like assault, battery, and false imprisonment; or with some property rights, like trespass or conversion; and various forms of negligence are Torts ("judge, the defendant was negligent in maintaining his parking lot by not fixing a dangerous and obscure crevice that was in it") -- but the final definition is a simple one: Any wrong that has been worked by someone, where there is no contract in effect, falls under Tort Law when the damaged person brings the grievance into Court and tries to seek a judicial remedy.

Such an easy concept to understand as that, with parallel easy to understand rules and judgment reasoning -- and lawyers are actually baffled by it. Similarly, orthodox medical doctors here in the United States are also blind, by replicating the advisory suggestions of drug companies pursuing Commercial Enrichment, to exclude the identification of simple nourishment deficiency as the true seminal point of mammalian disease origin. Against that sad background (of professionals not even knowing their own profession), the actual identification of Tort Law as an actual branch of the Majestic Oak is a relatively recent recognition by American lawyers. Up until about 1859, Tort Law was not understood as a separate and distinct branch of Law.

The first treatise in English on Torts was published in 1859 by Francis Hilliard of Cambridge, Massachusetts, who was followed a year later by an English author named Addison.

Even as late as 1871, the leading American legal periodical remarked that: "We are inclined to think that Torts is not a proper subject for a law book."

In 1853, when Mr. Joel Bishop proposed to write a book on the Law of Torts, he was assured then by all publishers he surveyed that there was no such call for such a work on that subject.

Yet, the distinction in effect between Tort Law and Contract Law was in effect during the Roman Empire. But in addressing Tort Law itself, if we were to hit you over the head with a baseball bat or burn down your house, there is no contract in effect governing the grievance, so Tort Law rules, reasoning, and arguments govern the settlement of this type of grievance. In addition to damages, judges always want to examine the factual record presented to analyze the Defendant's character, and make sure that the intent to damage was there (as consent and accidental damages can vitiate liability).

And so hitting someone over the head with a baseball bat is called an "assault," and there lies a Tort; however, there are many types of Torts that do not have any names assigned to them.

Some writers have attempted to uncover certain characteristics that lie in common to all Torts as a starting point to identify some Principles (yes, there may be some hope for a few of you lawyers after all).

One of the reasons why lawyers try and raise numerous sub-classifications of Tort up to the main level of Tort and Contract (as they grope and search in the dark the way they do), is because they do not see the invisible contracts that are often quietly in effect, correctly overruling Tort Law intervention, since an examination of the factual setting seems void of any contract.

You may not understand the deeper significance of the distinction in effect between Tort and Contract right now, but if you were to attend an AWARE seminar, the semantic differential in meaning should become very apparent to you, as we will give many examples of Contract Law and Tort Law reasoning's and arguments, as applied across many different factual settings; as whenever there is a judgment of some type, there is always in effect some rules and an exclusion of some evidence in the mind of the judge as to what arguments will and will not be allowed to be heard -- (even though this process goes on unmentioned orally by the judge); and the real reason why there is an important significance here that you might be interested in taking Personal Notice of [just like Judges take Judicial Notice of special items], in Tort and Contract rule differentials in judgment settings, is because we all have an impending Judgment with Heavenly Father -- where arguments then presented will be judged under similar Tort and Contract rules; a judgment setting where the pure magnitude of the consequences renders unprepared incorrect reasoning injudicious and lacking in foresight.

Like in Contract Law, there are numerous subdivisions within Tort Law to place a specific grievance into, such as: Civil Rights, Wrongful Death, Product Liability, Aviation Law, Personal Injury, Accident Recovery, Professional Malpractice, Unfair Competition, Admiralty and Maritime Torts, and certain Fraud and Anti-Trust actions, etc.

Based on the Status of the person involved and certain elements in the factual setting, and certain types of damages asked for, then what grievance normally would be under Contract Law, could be changed to fall under Tort Law.

So there is the general distinction in effect between Tort and Contract. It is important to note that defining the line between Tort and Contract is sometimes difficult. But, by attending an AWARE seminar you will see many invisible contracts for what they really are, and you will see how to identify the indicia that create invisible contracts and what to do about it. Refer to the seminar schedule page 5 for complete details.

AWARE has also added a large, comprehensive section on contracts to The Freedom Files, the CD you receive for FREE when you join AWARE. Details are on page 4.

Special Guest Seminar Speaker

The AWARE Group is proud to announce the addition of a special guest speaker for the scheduled seminars listed on page 5 of this newsletter. The speaker is Peymon Mottahedeh, President of Freedom Law School. Mr. Mottahedeh started this law school to help American's rid themselves of oppressive taxation and control at all levels of government. Peymon was born and raised in Iran, of a Jewish family, before coming to America in 1977. Having some of his relatives jailed, tortured and executed by the so-called Islamic Government of Iran, he knows what kind of tyranny awaits the American People if we do not wakeup, become informed and take action. In order to assist others in understanding these important issues Freedom Law School was founded in 1996 in Tustin, California and has become one of the most successful self-help law school in America.

Among the many graduates of Freedom Law School is Joe Banister, the former Special Agent of the Criminal Investigation Division of the IRS who quit the IRS after IRS refused to rebut his report that, by law, the filing and paying of Income Tax by working Americans is voluntary. Peymon's practical and easy to learn lectures and courses cover the spectrum of Freedom issues; from how to use the law library, to how to beat the IRS, to beating traffic tickets, to suing and jailing criminal government agents.

Peymon will speak for 2 hours at each of the scheduled seminars. He will cover taxes and various other freedom issues. Order your tickets today to ensure your seat.

America: The Good Neighbor

The following is an editorial broadcast from Toronto by Gordon Sinclair, a Canadian television commentator.

What follows is the full text of his trenchant remarks:

"This Canadian thinks it is time to speak up for the Americans as the most generous and possibly the least appreciated people on all the earth.

Germany, Japan and, to a lesser extent, Britain and Italy were lifted out of the debris of war by the Americans who poured in billions of dollars and forgave other billions in debts.

None of these countries is today paying even the interest on its remaining debts to the United States.

When France was in danger of collapsing in 1956, it was the Americans who propped it up, and their reward was to be insulted and swindled on the streets of Paris. I was there. I saw it.

When earthquakes hit distant cities, it is the United States that hurries in to help. This spring, 59 American communities were flattened by tornadoes. Nobody helped.

The Marshall Plan and the Truman Policy pumped billions of dollars into discouraged countries. Now newspapers in those countries are writing about the decadent, warmongering Americans.

I'd like to see just one of those countries that is gloating over the erosion of the United States dollar build its own airplane.

Does any other country in the world have a plane to equal the Boeing Jumbo Jet, the Lockheed Tri-Star, or the Douglas DC10?

If so, why don't they fly them? Why do all the International lines except Russia fly American Planes?

Why does no other land on earth even consider putting a man or woman on the moon?

You talk about Japanese technocracy, and you get radios.

You talk about German technocracy, and you get automobiles.

You talk about American technocracy, and you find men on the moon-not once, but several times-and safely home again.

You talk about scandals, and the Americans put theirs right in the store window for everybody to look at.

Even their draft-dodgers are not pursued and hounded. They are here on our streets, and most of them, unless they are breaking Canadian laws, are getting American dollars from ma and pa at home to spend here.

When the railways of France, Germany and India were breaking down through age, it was the Americans who rebuilt them.

When the Pennsylvania Railroad and the New York Central went broke, nobody loaned them an old caboose. Both are still broke.

I can name you 5000 times when the Americans raced to the help of other people in trouble. Can you name me even one time when someone else raced to the Americans in trouble?

I don't think there was outside help even during the San Francisco earthquake.

Our neighbors have faced it alone, and I'm one Canadian who is damned tired of hearing them get kicked around.

They will come out of this thing with their flag high. And when they do, they are entitled to thumb their nose at the lands that are gloating over their present troubles. I hope Canada is not one of those."

Stand proud, America!

The AWARE Group has a positive outlook for America's future and its people. If we stand united, one Nation, under God. We shall overcome the tragedies of September 11th, 2001 and shall find deep within ourselves a resolve and determination to say, "Never again"!
